Meet Sara De Pasquale, an interdisciplinary artist based in Zurich, skillfully bridging the past and present through her work. Sara studied Art and Design, laying a classical foundation that has inspired her captivating exploration of ceramics as a medium for creative expression.

By day, Sara serves as an art buyer and creative director in the insurance industry, showcasing her versatility and unwavering commitment to the arts. However, her true passion lies in creating art that deeply resonates with audiences. Her artistic journey commenced in 1995 with analog photo collages capturing precious moments. Over the years, she transitioned into acrylic paintings before captivating audiences with her Corrosion series, exploring the essence of metals, corrosion, and rust, gracefully embodying the concept of impermanence.

Sara draws inspiration for her art from the awe-inspiring landscapes of nature and the vibrant energy of urban life, with London serving as a particularly influential muse. Her creations intricately weave together elements of humanity, environment, culture, and the ever-changing life cycle, reflecting the essence of today's dynamic world.

Introducing Sara De Pasquale's Exquifusion Art on Ceramics series, a powerful and delicate exploration that empowers the LGBTQ+ community, with a special emphasis on supporting women and championing freedom of speech. The fragility of her porcelain figurines mirrors the delicate nature of love within our environment. Much like the vulnerability of these intricate pieces, the series symbolizes the fragility and strength of relationships, particularly within marginalized communities.

This collection aims to contribute to body positivity by sharing a personal journey of overcoming self-doubt. Just as these delicate figurines gain strength from their fragile nature, Sara aspires to encourage others to find confidence within themselves. Through her own evolution and self-assurance, she seeks to motivate and inspire others to embrace their beauty.

The uniqueness of Sara's art on ceramics lies not only in its delicate nature but also in its profound purity and vibrant energy. Sara De Pasquale introduces the Exquifusion series as a testament to creativity, personality, and a subtle touch of humor. This collection seamlessly blends exquisite elements, fusing different styles into harmonious compositions that resonate with the essence of empowerment, love, and acceptance.

As you explore the Exquifusion Art on Ceramics series, immerse yourself in a narrative that celebrates diversity, encourages self-love, and advocates for the freedom to express one's true self. Sara's vision extends beyond the delicate surface, creating a space where art becomes a catalyst for positive change and empowerment.
